

Youth, Who Shot Woman, Tries To Save Her Life

He Agrees to Transfusion When Told Sweetheart Cannot Live.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—Mrs. Florence Robinson, twenty-four years old, who was shot by a youth, who became her lover, yesterday shot her own life to save her sweetheart's. The youth, who was shot by her, was told that his sweetheart could not live unless he was transfused with her blood. He agreed to the transfusion, and the operation was successful. The youth, who was shot by her, was told that his sweetheart could not live unless he was transfused with her blood. He agreed to the transfusion, and the operation was successful.

POSITIVE Power Rules The World; Citizenship And Religion Demand It

Little Heard of Skepticism These Days; Chairs in Universities Formerly Filled by Infidels Now Occupied by Men Believers; Cross of Christ is the Plus Sign; Call Sounded For Men and Women to Take Their Stand.

By REV. FULLER SWIFT, Ph. D.

"Let your way be as the way of peace."

THE place and power of the period in the punctuation of sentences challenges our attention and commands our respect. The same thing is true of everything of the positive nature. The little comma, without which no lengthy sentence is understandable, has its part to play. The colon and semicolon, while more dignified than the comma, do much the same kind of work in a sentence but in a larger way. The interrogation point, or question mark, opens wide gates to large fields of speculation. The exclamation point is a sort of glorified period.

But when all the punctuation points have been marshaled, their virtues catalogued and their importance admitted, the punctuation point is still wanting. What the effect would be should the woman whom Gordon had tried to kill be saved from death through his own sacrifice of blood.

It is the smallest and least adorned of all, the simple, single dot that is ever the more precious and it is expressive of the positive. It is always the positive element which makes for power. Now, as never before in the world's history, is there no great demand for the positive element?

We want it in education. There are certain fundamentals which are free from the atmosphere of uncertainty which now stand foremost in the teaching of our best schools and colleges. While the field of speculation is as large or larger than ever, it is less comfortable and less inhabited than the field of the positive. It is the field of the positive that is the more practical and workable. For a long time the interrogation point has carried the banner in the field of education. Men have wanted to know and still want to know.

Apply to Business World. The interrogation point is accompanied by the real challenge for information, but the period is ever found at the end of the answer in every question. It is in the period the positive element—where we find most satisfaction.

All this is equally true in the business world. The up-to-date business man, who is always a salesman, is admonished to develop his positive qualities. The salesman who opens a conversation with the question, "Would you like to buy?" or "Do you think you could use my line?" or "Don't you think it is possible for us to strike oil?" will surely be met by a great, big, defeating "No!" The real salesman has the assurance of a seal and displays it with force and tact, and gets the business. The salesman who may be expressed through the respective channels of personal representation of the proposition or who advertises, but in either channel there must predominate the positive element. In business of the present day the negative has been sent to the back line and the positive made the prime sign.

Likewise in citizenship. There is the demand for the positive element. The call for it is loud and clear. We are just waking up to the great need for the positive element in citizenship. We have been paying too much attention to the negative citizen. He may be a reactionary, objector or skeptic of the proposition or of the cause, but he may be or otherwise he may be found, he has had his fair share of attention and advertisement. He has been magnified into a menace.

Christianity, Positive Element. Christianity stands forth today with the positive element predominant. It is the best and highest of the cause of Christ. In the Old Testament men had prophecy and sought God. In the New Testament men have faith and sought God. In the New Testament men have faith and sought God. In the New Testament men have faith and sought God.

Skepticism is a diminutive quantity today. Where are the infidels? The only books of note printed about infidelity today are those of authors long since dead and books, the copyrights of which have long since expired. Where are the destructive critics of 20 years ago? Their chairs in the universities are being filled with men who have caught the true vision of Christianity and who proclaim the saving factor of unselfish service of man for man. This positive element in Christianity is its glory and its good.

The cross of Christ is a plus sign. It means addition, not subtraction. It is positive, not negative. It is the power of the positive which is everywhere being recognized that is doing the most good for the world. It comes from a great conviction. The call is sounded around the world today for men and women to take their stand for the definitely right and true.

Exercises to Reduce.

THERE is no hard or fast rule as to what time of the day exercises should be taken. Generally speaking, it is much better to do them in the morning as soon as you get out of bed and to follow them, since they make the skin active, by a warm bath. However, if you have various household duties to attend to, it is much better to get them done first, speeding up on your work as much as possible. Routine housework done in a nervous rush is itself a reduction exercise. Here are some others:

Stand with the feet together, arms outstretched at the sides on a level with the hands. Ascribe large circles with the hands, swiveling the arms round and round and doing this about fifty times. This is splendid for round shoulders and fat backs.

Stretch the arms outstretched as before, bend sideways, first to the right, then to the left, ten or fifteen times.

Put the hands on the hips and revolve the upper part of the body about ten or twelve times. To be most effective there should be no movement from the hips down.

Then there is one very good exercise, which is to bend and touch the floor with the fingers a dozen times, always keeping the knees perfectly straight.

There are several other exercises which will reduce, but I shall not give them today. Those I have given should be done as swiftly and vigorously as possible. Deep breathing should be practiced between each exercise.

Questions and Answers. Mrs. G. R.—There is nothing you can use to fill out hollow cheeks caused by having the teeth pulled. If you gain in weight it will, of course, round out the face a little bit.

William R.—An electric vibrator used on the scalp would be an excellent stimulant and would undoubtedly help your hair. Use the crude oil treatment once a week instead of every two weeks until the dry condition of the scalp disappears.

Mrs. C. E. R.—Whether it is advisable to use a cold cream every night depends on the condition of the skin. A dry skin will benefit; an oily skin will not. If you will use a combination of cold cream massages and daily

STAGGERS THE IMAGINATION

The telegraph has carried us the news, of wells in the wonder Homer, Louisiana, field, of 10,000, 20,000 and 30,000 barrels a day, at a shallow depth. These wells range in depth all the way from 1200 to 2200 feet. Remember that the wells in Ranger and Eastland are at a depth of about 3500 feet and it is well to note that the last 1000 feet is the most difficult and expensive part of the drilling.

The bringing in of these mammoth wells is of almost daily occurrence. Yesterday's daily papers tell us of another gusher of 25,000 barrels. Think what this means in money—over $50,000.00 a day—$350,000.00 a week—$1,400,000.00 a month. Enough money to much more than pay the entire capitalization of the

SERVICE OIL CORPORATION

Each month from this one well alone, and this great organization has enough acreage jam up in this wonder field to drill hundreds of wells. Ocean and Ranger Central officered by the same men are each paying 100 percent, a few weeks after the wells came in. We can see no reason why Service should not pay 1000 percent or even 2000 percent. With these stupendous possibilities, is it any wonder that eastern capital is grabbing up all the Porterfield-Best-Smith stocks that they can lay their hands on. Of course, you expect to buy SERVICE—we all do—but one of these days it will be withdrawn, just as suddenly as Homer Union was. If you are not particular whether you get this stock or not, take your time, but if you really want SERVICE our advice is to order immediately.

You can wire at our expense and let remittance follow by FIRST mail.
